Green Clean Technology

Local auto-detailing service gets cars 'green clean' with the power of steam.

At the first hint of spring, many Americans go into a house-cleaning frenzy. We flip our mattresses, wash our windows, scrub our decks.

But all too often, we neglect to spring-clean our cars. Sure, we wash away the sand and the salt, but our vehicles — frequently a breeding ground for germs — often require more of a deep cleaning than we realize. After all, bacteria grow in spilled food and beverages, and vehicles that regularly carry children can be the worst culprits.

In a recent survey to determine the amount of bacteria and mold in automobiles, Healthy House Institute concluded that married couples and women are the worst offenders.

Detail XPerts, a new metro Detroit green-technology franchise, has devised a solution without excessive water and harsh chemicals. Their green steam-cleaning technology has drawn the attention of local police departments and ambulance companies, as it's critically important for them to keep their vehicles bacteria-free.

“Our steam cleaning system uses very little water,” says company president Angela Williams, “and it manages to kill nearly all bacteria,” including flu bugs, cold viruses, and other contaminants. And the company's franchises can clean up to 15 vehicles with just two gallons of water.

Detail XPerts has five metro Detroit service locations, as well as a mobile detail unit — so they can bring their service to you.

“People want to know their vehicles are clean,” Williams says, “but they want assurance that soaps and sprays aren't going to cause their allergies to get worse. That's the beauty of our system; it cleans better than leading brands without harmful chemicals or fragrances. It's just green clean from distilled water.”
